the teaching of history in south african and japanese schools has attracted sustained criticism for the alleged attempts to conceal the controversial aspects of their countries past and to inculcate ideologies favourable to the ruling regimes this book is the first attempt to systematically compare the ways in which education bureaucracy in both nations dealt with opposition and critics in the period from ca 1945 to 1995 when both countries were dominated by single party governments for most of the fifty years the author argues that both south african and japanese education bureaucracy did not overtly express its intentions in the curriculum documents or in the textbooks but found ways to enhance its authority through a range of often subtle measures a total of eight themes in 60 officially approved standard 6 south african and japanese middle school history textbooks have been selected to demonstrate the changes and continuity this work hopes to contribute to the existing literature of comparative history by drawing lessons that would probably not have emerged from the study of either country by itself the dissertation won a publication prize at georg eckert institute for textbook research radical activists do not see the american middle school as an organization to impart academic knowledge but as an instrument through which they can force social change yecke an experienced teacher and administrator shows how these activists have implemented their plans and endangered the education of all middle school children especially those who are gifted in 1983 a nation at risk declared if an unfriendly foreign power had attempted to impose on america the mediocre educational performance that exists today we might well have viewed it as an act of war how did american educators respond in their quest to establish a more egalitarian society middle school activists and social reformers made it clear that the middle school was not just a new educational organization but a means promoting social egalitarianism by coercing gifted students to be like everyone else this was nothing less than a declaration of war against gifted children yecke shows that the inadequacies of our systems of research and education pose a greater threat to u s national security over the next quarter century than any potential conventional war that we might imagine the achievement of students in other nations now regularly surpasses that of american students and it will be impossible to reverse this trend within the confines of the contemporary middle school concept yecke asserts that it is time for the american public to reject the radical middle school movement before too much damage is done
